YOUR GUIDE TO THE FINEST IN HIGHLANDS AND CASHIERS

Lupoli Construction

If you've driven down the Dillard Road, chances are you've noticed the perfectly manicured rainbow of flowers across from Mitchell's Lodge, also known as the Lupoli Construction office. The attention to detail and aesthetic perfection evident in this garden is a true representation of how John Lupoli runs his company. Lupoli Construction has been a celebrated custom homebuilder in Highlands and Cashiers since 1982. John began contributing to the town of Highlands however, in 1975 when he relocated from Miami. His appreciation for Western North Carolina's distinction and charm has grown exponentially with each passing year. Driven by their respect for the environment, Lupoli Construction's mission is to improve the community by creating refined homes with superior craftsmanship while maintaining its natural beauty. John and his management team, including Jim Shearon, Billy Cribbs, Susan Herman and Miriam Rogers, have truly perfected the art of aiding clients in the realization of their mountain dream home. Of course rustic elegance isn't limited to the extravagant- Lupoli Construction has build its reputation on modest remodels and small projects as well.

From humble beginnings as a painter, John's portfolio now includes more than 150 custom homes ranging from a few thousand to 12,000 square feet. Lupoli Construction is responsible for some of the beautiful residences you've seen at Highlands Country Club, Cullasaja Club, Mountain Top, Lake Toxaway, The Old Edwards Club, Wade Hampton, and almost every other community in the area. Their work has been highlighted in several national magazines such as Southern Accents and regional publications such as Builder/Architect Magazine and Views. The builder's reputation and commitment to excellence was recently confirmed when the Old Edwards Inn and Spa hired Lupoli Construction for the renovation of the Old Edwards Club at Highlands Cove.

While no one is immune to these tough economic times, John and his team have managed to stay afloat. He notes that people are interested more and more in stability, quality, and security. "When times are hard, we all weigh decisions with greater scrutiny. As a builder and full-time resident in the area for more than 30 years, I can provide a steadfast reputation rooted in helping clients protect their investments," said Lupoli.
